

The Honorable Michael Regan
Administrator
United States Environmental Protection Agency
1200 Pennsylvania Ave, NW
Washington, DC 20460

Re: Docket ID EPA-HQ-OAR-2022-0985; Docket ID EPA-HQ-OAR-2022-0829

Dear Administrator Regan:

We urge the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency to finalize strong emissions standards for heavy-duty, light-duty and medium-duty vehicles this year. These emissions standards are critical for addressing climate change, improving public health and promoting environmental justice.

We appreciate your proposal to strengthen greenhouse gas emissions limits for new heavy-duty vehicles. We urge you to ensure that they are finalized this year, as new diesel trucks have long lifespans on our roads. We also urge you to make the final rule even stronger than the proposal. The final standards should be at least as stringent as the state-level Advanced Clean Trucks program currently in place in many states.

We also appreciate your proposal to strengthen limits on greenhouse gases and other air pollutants for new light-duty and medium-duty vehicles in Model Years 2027-2032. We call on you to ensure these standards for all pollutants are finalized this year as well. We appreciate that in the proposal, you included alternative levels, and urge you to build off Alternative 1 – the most stringent option – in the final rule. This alternative will yield the most health benefits from pollution reductions.

Emissions from vehicles powered by gasoline and diesel pose immediate harm to health. In the heavy-duty vehicle sector, pollution from diesel-powered trucks and buses drive health harms including asthma attacks, heart attacks and strokes, and premature death. Seventy-two million people are estimated to live near truck freight routes, and they are more likely to be people of color and with lower incomes.

Pollution from light- and medium-duty vehicles powered by gasoline and diesel, like passenger cars, SUVs, pickup trucks and package delivery vans, also harms public health and is driving climate change. Particulate matter can cause immediate health harm, including respiratory and cardiovascular disease and even premature death.

Transportation is the single biggest source of greenhouse gas emissions in the U.S. and transitioning to zero-emission cars is a critical part of addressing climate change. Climate change is a health emergency, leading to more frequent and intense extreme weather events like flooding, excessive heat, drought, and wildfires; longer and more intense allergy seasons; increased risks from water-borne and vector-borne diseases like Lyme Disease; and worsening air quality.

Stronger limits on emissions from cars, vans, buses and trucks will help drive a nationwide transition to zero-emission vehicles, which is crucial for not only addressing climate change, but also for improving public health and equity.

Alabama
